“Courage”

What does it mean to be a People of Courage?

I have a book called Courage by Bernard Waber. It's a kids' book, with illustrations, and so it's full of wonderful images. The cover is a little boy standing on the edge of a very high diving board. It has gotten so this is what I picture when someone says the word courage. I suppose for some, diving off of a high board would be easy. For others, it would take a lot of bravery and determination even to think about jumping off. I'm one of the latter. Just looking at that book gives me butterflies in my stomach.

Courage, of course, looks different for different people, and it looks different for each one of us. The book that I'm referring to has all sorts of ideas what courage is: "Courage is the first to make up after an argument. Courage is sending a valentine to someone you secretly admire, and signing your real name. Courage is the bottom of the ninth, tie score, two outs, bases loaded, and your turn to bat. Courage is explaining the rip in your brand-new pants. Courage is starting over. Courage is holding on to your dream." It's a good reminder that the need for courage is woven into every single day, both for really big things and for smaller things.

After I graduated from college, I joined the Peace Corps, and ended up teaching English as a foreign language in Poland. When I share this with people, they often talk about how much courage it must have taken me to do that. For me, the most courageous part wasn't the actual decision and the leap of faith of the whole adventure. What took the most courage for me was the ordinary parts of it: every day, getting up, and being a real teacher in a high school, negotiating life in a foreign country, learning the language and figuring out how to get by. It felt like an act of courage to go to the store, or the bank, or to face the next group of students that came through my classroom door.

Sometimes what looks like courage from the outside has its grounding in deep seated convictions about what you feel like you need to do. I have another book which has one of my favorite pieces about courage. "Courage has roots", writes J. Ruth Gendler in the Book of Qualities, "She sleeps on a futon on the floor and lives close to the ground. Courage looks you straight in the eye. She is not impressed with powertrippers, and she knows first aid." Perhaps you have felt like this when you've set out to do something that feels necessary--a little nervous, but filled with conviction that what you are about to do is what you need to do, and that helps keep you grounded.

Life these days, when so much of what we care about seems called into question in some way, feels like it takes a lot of that kind of courage. The kind where you need to act and show just what is is you believe. It's not always the easiest thing to do, and sometimes it seems like it doesn't make a difference. But we do it anyway; we have to, even when we don't know where it will lead. Gendler continues, "Courage is not afraid to weep, and she is not afraid to pray, even when she not sure who she is praying to."

What does it mean to be a people of courage? It means that we are working our way towards a vision of more hope, more faith, more love. We will get there by listening to our inner voices and our deep convictions, taking a deep breath, and doing what needs to be done. Gendler concludes: "When Courage walks, it is clear she has made the journey from loneliness to solitude. The people who told me she is stern were not lying; they just forgot to mention that she is kind."

Our Spiritual Exercises

OPTION A:

Step Outside Your Comfort Zone

We rarely give ordinary courage the honor it is due. On a daily basis, the threats we face are not the dramatic dangers of burning buildings but the insidious hazards of our comfort zones. This reminds us that the enemy of courage is often not fear but safety and routine. Sometimes those routines support and structure our lives; sometimes they stifle and shrink them. So this month, you are invited to pursue the practice of ordinary risk and adventure. Your instructions are simple: Pick an activity that pulls you out of your comfort zone.

Here's some inspiration and guidance:

- <http://www.lifehack.org/articles/lifestyle/step-out-of-the-comfort-zone.html>
- <http://www.lifehack.org/articles/lifestyle/how-to-move-out-of-your-comfort-zone.html>

Come to your group ready to share:

1. Why you picked this activity - share a bit about how your comfort zone had become "dangerous."
2. How your activity emboldened you, and hopefully changed you.
3. How you plan to stick with it - what skills or new ways of thinking did you learn that will keep you from falling back into your rut.

OPTION B:

Finally Say "No."

Courage is often about bravely saying "yes," but sometimes saying "no" is what is needed. Opening ourselves to new experiences enriches us, but putting our foot down and setting boundaries often saves us. So this month, you are invited to identify and lean into a brave "No!"

Here's an article to help you on your way: <https://www.psychologytoday.com/articles/201311/the-power-no>.

OPTION C:
Prop Up The Courage of Others

We all have people in our lives who inspire us with their courage. But have we ever told them? We know how important it is to have our courage noticed, so let's be sure to offer that gift to others this month. Write a letter, give a symbolic gift or treat them to lunch or coffee--whatever it is, find a way to tell someone that their bravery is seen and matters. It's said that courage is contagious. But how would one ever know that their bravery has inspired many, unless we tell them so?

OPTION D:
Revisit the Pain of Your Bullied Past

October is Bullying Prevention Month. It invites us not only to notice how we can stop it, but also to reckon with the legacy of bullying in our own lives. Very few of us have escaped the hurt of being bullied or the guilt of bullying others. This exercise asks us to return to those wounds of our past. Here are your instructions:

1. Make time to meditate and reflect on these two videos:
 - For the courage of the bullied and beautiful - <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=sa1iS1MqUy4&spfreload=10>
(<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=yEVOry878oQ> - expressed through dance)
 - Why I Bully - <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=8mmlu5IZmvE>
2. Let the videos take you back to your own experience.
3. Share that experience of bullying or being bullied with someone you trust, and invite them to share their own experiences. Talk through the lasting impact and what each of you have done to work through it.
4. Identify what work is still needed. Keep in mind that it might involve looking at how bullying is still at work in your current adult life.

OPTION E: The Courage of An Ally

As a faith movement, we are waking up to the need for radical action around racial justice and healing. For white UUs, that work involves a deeper and more developed understanding of allyship. It is possibly the most courageous work to which we are called today. So this month, you are invited to begin or lean more intentionally into that work. Here is one way to turn that work into a spiritual practice this month:

1. Listen and learn: Make time this month to go through the list of videos and essays below.
2. Identify Your Resistance: Notice where you find yourself pushing back while watching and reading the videos and essays. Try to avoid defensiveness. Also be sure to offer yourself compassion.
3. Identify and Commit to Your Work: Maybe it's more learning. Perhaps it involves finding the courage to confront racism from a family member or co-worker. You might even be ready to invite someone into a courageous conversation. Take your time to figure it out. If you listen deeply to the videos and articles, your work will surely and clearly emerge.

Your Question

As always, don't treat these questions like "homework" or a list that needs to be covered in its entirety. Instead, simply pick the single question that speaks to you most and let it lead you where you need to go. The goal is to figure out what being a part of a people of courage means for you and your daily living. So, which question is calling to you? Which one contains "your work"?

1. Is it time to bravely start trusting people again?
2. Is it time to tell someone how scared you really are?
3. Is it time to bravely admit, "I was wrong"?
4. Is safely tiptoeing around "it" making you ill?
5. Where are you saying "yes" when you need to courageously say "no"?
6. Have you mistakenly convinced yourself that courage can come without sacrifice?
7. Who says it's always courageous to never give up? How might life be calling you to bravely let it go and walk away?
8. How might your life change if you saw optimism as our time's most courageous act?
9. Has your courage been bought off by money and status? Has comfort led you to forgetting what courage feels like?
10. Does your faith make you dangerous? Has your religion or your God become small and tame?
11. Instead of standing up and speaking out, is courage now asking you to sit down and listen?
12. Who in your life needs their courage affirmed and celebrated? Who needs told that their courage is contagious and helping you be more brave?
13. What's your question? Your question may not be listed above. As always, if the above questions don't include what life is asking from you, spend the month listening to your days to hear it.

Companion Pieces

Recommended Resources for Exploration and Reflection

The below recommended resources are not “required reading.” We will not analyze these pieces at our small group meeting. Instead they are here to companion you on your personal journey this month, get your thinking started, and open you to new ways of thinking about what it means to be part of a people of COURAGE.

Word Roots

From Latin cor heart: denoting the heart, as the seat of feelings.

Wise Words

Here is the world. Beautiful and terrible things will happen. Do not be afraid.

- Frederick Buechner

All around you, people will be tiptoeing through life, just to arrive at death safely. But dear children, do not tiptoe. Run, hop, skip, or dance, just don't tiptoe.”

- Shane Claiborne

Safety is not the thing you should look for. Joy is what you should look for. Security and joy may not come in the same package. They can, but they also cannot. There is no guarantee.

- Neale Donald Walsh

What the world desperately needs is more dangerous disciples of an unsafe God. You can only be safe if you've fashioned for yourself a God small and tame...because grace is a dangerous thing...and real love is never safe. There are Pharisees — and I've been one — who are alive and well and who feel far safer with a dead God, one they seal up in a coffin of mere theory, one they bury under the sod of human rationality and tidiness...Maybe faith isn't as much formula as the mystery of being drawn to, surrendering to, the overwhelming love and will of the most dangerous Reality in all the universe?...Those who have [God's dangerous love] in their bones aren't ever safe. Open flames are always dangerous.

- Ann Voskamp

“It's a shallow life that doesn't give a person a few scars.”

-- Garrison Keillor

It simply isn't an adventure worth telling if there aren't dragons in it.

- J.R.R. Tolkien

“To get something you never had, you have to do something you never did.”

- Unknown

“Courage is not the absence of fear, but rather the judgement that something else is more important than fear.”

- Ambrose Redmoon

"Don't be afraid of your fears. They're not there to scare you. They're there to let you know that something is worth it."

- C. JoyBell

“Perhaps all the dragons in our lives are princesses who are only waiting to see us act, just once, with beauty and courage. Perhaps everything that frightens us is, in its deepest essence, something helpless that wants our love.”

– Rainer Maria Rilke, Letters to a Young Poet

"Our word 'courage' comes from the French word coeur, 'heart'. Courage is a willingness to act from the heart, to let your heart lead the way, not knowing what will be required of you next, and if you can do it."

- Jean Shinoda Bolen

"Courage is when you know you're licked before you begin, but you begin anyway and see it through no matter what.

- Harper Lee (To Kill a Mockingbird)

Softness is not weakness. It takes courage to stay delicate in a world so cruel.

- Beau Taplin

"Courage doesn't always roar. Sometimes courage is the quiet voice at the end of the day saying, 'I will try again tomorrow.'"

- Mary Anne Radmacher

Sometimes standing against evil is more important than defeating it. The greatest heroes stand because it is right to do so, not because they believe they will walk away with their lives. Such selfless courage is a victory in itself. - N.D. Wilson

"The reward for conformity was that everyone liked you except yourself."

- Rita Mae Brown

"Courage is acting out of self respect for doing the right thing. To not act, or to do something different other than the right thing, is soul murder. Not being true to oneself and others leaves one diminished and in some ways less than human." - Harry Holleywood

Fear by Shel Silverstein

Barnabus Browning
Was scared of drowning,
So he never would swim
Or get into a boat
Or take a bath
Or cross a moat.
He just sat day and night
With his door locked tight
And the windows nailed down,
Shaking with fear
That a wave might appear,
And cried so many tears
That they filled up the room
And he drowned.

"A hero is no braver than an ordinary person, but they are braver five minutes longer."

-- Ralph Waldo Emerson

"Courage is the price that life exacts for granting peace."

- Amelia Earhart

If we must both be right, we will lose each other.

- Nayyirah Waheed

Out Stealing Horses

by Per Petterson

“In this quiet but compelling novel, Trond Sander, a widower nearing seventy, moves to a bare house in remote eastern Norway, seeking the escape of a quiet life of contemplation. But a chance encounter with a neighbor—the brother, as it happens, of his childhood friend Jon—causes him to ruminate on the summer of 1948, the last he spent with his adored father, who abandoned the family soon afterward. Trond’s recollections center on a single afternoon, when he and Jon set out to take some horses from a nearby farm; what began as an exhilarating adventure ended abruptly and traumatically in an act of unexpected cruelty. The memories lead to a courageous effort to reconcile with the past, with Trond asking himself Dicken’s famous line in David Copperfield, ‘Whether I shall turn out to be the hero of my own life, or whether that station will be held by anybody else, these pages must show.’ ”

However, things took an unexpected turn as the Dixie Chicks spoke out against the U.S. invasion of Iraq which resulted in a death threat and dozens of others personal attacks by fans. The rest of the story involves being pulled into the courage to stand up for what believe--even when the cost is great.
